Disgusted and cheated

Editor:

A popular phrase of previous generation is, "the children are our future". Obviously, the belief of thought has not yet reached Appomattox. The support of the young people and their activities (excluding athletics) is nearly non-existant.

I recently attended the ACHS Drama Club's production of "The Diary of Anne Frank." Besides being quite an acknowledged piece of literature, this was being performed by members of our own community. The auditorium was roughly a quarter of the way full. And yet, how many more will watch the same play done on television when it airs?

This lack of support seems to extend to any "cultural" type performance. The music department has extended greatly in the past few years and yet, its performances are also ignored by the majority of Appomattox. Are we unable to enjoy cultural entertainment or may we plead ignorance?

I wonder seriously about a town whose only local paper features as front page news for several weeks, the arrests, trial, and convictions of some of its youth. Yet, they place an article announcing the Madrigal's Fall Concert on the inner column of the sports page. The pictures that were to accompany the article, we were told, will appear the following week-a week after the performance.

With this type of support, our young people have every right to feel disgusted and cheated. They have been!! Granted, every aspect of news needs to be covered but when the talent of our youth is overrided by the notoriety, I feel someone's judgement is in error.

Sincerely,
(Miss) Tamara Nash

Watch those pyramids

By SHIRLEY W. WALTON

*Note: Because of the many schemes going this season of the year, I wish to share with you an article that appared in Consumer Comments, a monthly newsletter of consumer information.

Pyramid Promotional Schemes often encourage the prospective participant to invest in distributorships which promote "new invention", vending machines, work-at-home plans (such as addressing and stuffing envelopes), soap and cleaning products, perfume products, vacuum cleaners or other kinds of goods. A Pyramid Promotional Scheme may involve only the sale of services, rather than the sale of a product. The Pyramid Promotional Scheme is set up very much like the chain letter (which is also illegal), if exchange of money is involved. The chain letter asks you to send an item, sometimes monetary (such as a quarter) to the top person on the list, add your name to the bottom of the list and then send like letters to an additional number of persons. You are assured that within several weeks you would begin to receive items of similar value in the mail and eventually accumulate quite an inventory of valuable property or money.

In order to join a pyramid set-up, the participant is asked to invest a certain amount of money in a position such as a "manager" or a "distributor." For this money he may be given an investory of items to sell and then may be compensated for inducing others to become participants. In order to be successful for all participants, the pyramid must have an endless pool of people.

Pyramid Promotional Schemes are illegal in Virginia and a person who frontrives, prepares, sets up, operates, advertises or promotes any pyramid promotional scheme in the State of Virginia is guilty of a Class 1 misdemeanor. Before entering into any financial transaction, research the company carefully, get appropriate counseling from a lawyer or banker and study relevant documents such as a contract. The VDACS Office of Consumer Affairs will be happy to provide a reading list of pyramid promotions.

If you find an illegal promotional scheme operating in your area, contact the Virginia Office of Consumer Affairs. The toll-free number is 800-55-9963.

If you have a homemaking question or problem, you may call 352-8244 or write P. O. Box 488, Appomattox, Va. 24522.

Have a good week!

The Pastor Speaks

By DANIEL W. MENSER
Hollywood and Central Baptist Churches

"But without faith it is impossible. He. 11:6."

The first century had been a most difficult period for the Hebrew Christians. Persecution had placed a tremendous strain upon their newly formed loyalty to Christ. Some had deserted, others were losing their enthusiasm. Something important had to be done and done quickly. The writer of the Book of Hebrews recognized this, and he did it. He reminded those discouraged people of the importance of faith. He recalled a catalogue of the great notables of their national history and pointed out convincingly that they were great, not because of their possessions or material security, but because of their faith.

The writer of old had something. He had caught the gleam of a great truth. It was true for that period, and it has been true ever since. The big things of life have always been accomplished on the basis of faith. The story of faith is one of magnificent recklessness on the part of real men-men who burned their boats on the beaches and ventured into the unknown.

Today we need to remind ourselves of this great truth. Discouraging things have happened, and perhaps more discouraging things are ahead. It is easy to take the role of the cynic. We must maintain our balance by the stabilizing force of an unshakable faith-faith in our country, faith in our God.

A person is never defeated if faith lives on in his heart. Jesus said: "Upon this rock (this faith) I will build my church; and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it." An individual, a church, or a nation established on the rock of faith cannot be shaken by an individual nation. "Only those of strong religious faith survive."

The Christian message we must keep singing in our hearts is this: "Joy to the world! the Lord is come." This is our witness; "Be of good cheer; I have overcome the world."

Today, we hear that the forces of evil seem to be in control, and that God is dead. My Bible tells me a different story, that God is much alive. This life we live here is but the beginning of an eternity of blessed growth that perfection which will bring to us the security and serenity which all men truly seek. By keeping our faith in Him and holding close to Him, find a refuge in time of stress, courage in the face of danger, and strength in time of temptation.

Let us continue to pray for one another as we walk this path of life here on earth together.
